'Mixmind - Debate Platform', now available for iOS and Android

Mixmind is a chat app that matches two strangers with opposite opinions about a certain topic

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Mixmind is a communication platform to debate and exchange views on current issues of polarized opinions by matching strangers that selected the same subject to be discussed and that have opposite opinions for this same subject they have selected. It has just been released for iOS and Android,

Although the internet has a great potential for being the main source of democracy, there is a lack of tools capable of effectively managing and moderating these debates. And, as a result of the absence of the proper tool, nowadays the internet space is chaotic, with many discussions, but all of them being disorganized, aggressive and ineffective. That's what Mixmind comes to fix.

Mixmind ensures the debate flow with a brand new chat structure where the user has to mark his message type (statement, refutation, question, answer, source, etc) before sending it and earns points being kind and respectful through the chats and loses otherwise. The more points the user gets, more control he has over the debate.

The app was made (concept, design and code) by a single student at a digital media design graduation course in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The project thus is academic and also serve as a social experiment. It's 100% free to use and it's currently being developed as a nonprofit app.
